

What's in the Patches?

In each patch are organic nanocrystals with new, proprietary and patented crystal formations. Each patch has different proportions of combinations of amino acids, water, stabilized oxygen, sugars and salts that each form a different crystal lattice structure because of the ratio of the substances contained therein.

The patches are activated by our own body's light frequencies such as infrared and visible light that we cannot see with our eyes. Each patch is designed to specifically elevate a normally occurring peptide that our bodies produce. Because of the different structural formation and pattern of the different crystal lattice structures, each patch reflects a different frequency back into our body, that we are already making, thereby activating the production of specific useful and beneficial peptides that in turn activate different pathways in our bodies for long-term better health and function!

The process is called photobiomodulation, light creating change in the body.

The patches are latex free, non-transdermal, completely free of any drugs, chemicals, or stimulants and do not interfere with any medications you are taking since nothing goes into your body. The patches simply reflect back inward the wavelength of light emitted from our body.
